fittingly describes the long life of Katherine Cobb Moore, one of the Louisville Conference members. James William and Elizabeth Metna Furnace, Hart County, Ky., died at Russellville, July 15, 1942. Funeral services were conducted by Dr. W. A. Grant, Rev. John and the writer. She was laid to rest in the Guthrie Cemetery of that city.

in Christ early in life and a member of the First Methodist Church at Knoxes Creek. She was a member of that church until the day she received her into the fellowship. On the day he performed the funeral services she was reared in the atmosphere of a home that was dedicated herself to the exigencies of a most capable and efficient as a worker in the work of the church. At the age of three years as District Secretary of the Owensboro

Moore, she taught school. She was a graduate — and was considered a good teacher. She loved to teach. Her husband, she taught a Sunday school class in the school.

but while they were at Beaver Dam she is now married to Mr. C. R. Moore, a late member of the Louisville Conference in which the Moores loved to live. —J. W. Weldon

MRS. J. A. POE

Anna Lillian McElroy Poe, widow of Rev. J. A. Poe, was born in Columbus, Ohio, August 19, 1873. She was united in marriage to Rev. J. A. Poe, March 15, 1900, and for thirty-three years they labored together in the Methodist itinerancy. After the death of her beloved husband she remained in her home in Guthrie, Ky.

She was only sick a few days and on March 15, 1942, her wedding anniversary, she pillowed her head on God's promise and gently fell to sleep to awake on the other side of the divide.

During her illness, I had the pleasure of calling most every day. Her faith and patience were an inspiration. She told me she would soon be gone, and that death held no fear for her.

She leaves three daughters and a host of friends.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Coffman, pastor of the Christian Church. Her body was laid to rest beside her beloved husband in the Guthrie Cemetery.

*Servant of God, well done,
 Thy glorious warfare past,
 The battle fought, the victory won,

MRS. C. E. VOGEL

Mrs. Nancy Vogel, wife of the Rev. C. E. Vogel, died at the Deaconess Hospital, Louisville, on June 18, 1942. She had been married to Brother Vogel better than thirty years, and was a true help-mate to him in his ministry. Those who knew her best testify to the richness of her religious experience and her devotion to the work of the Kingdom. Funeral services were conducted from Trinity-Temple Church with Drs. R. V. Bennett, H. W. Whitaker, and S. C. Rice in charge. Burial was in Cave Hill Cemetery, Louisville.
